Country background

Australia, with about 27.9 million people at 31 March 2026, is a constitutional monarchy whose capital is Canberra.[1,3] Anthony Albanese continues as Prime Minister after Labor won 94 House seats in 2025, and Mark Butler is Minister for Health and Ageing.[8,15,16] The Commonwealth funds Medicare while the states run public hospitals.[18] Life expectancy at birth was 83.1 years in 2024, 87.7 percent of people lived in urban areas in 2025, and people aged 65 and over made up 18.1 percent.[10,12,13] Dementia became the leading cause of death in 2024.[20] The key risk is cost: health takes 16.4 percent of Commonwealth expenses in 2026-27, and the Budget forecasts slower growth.[17]

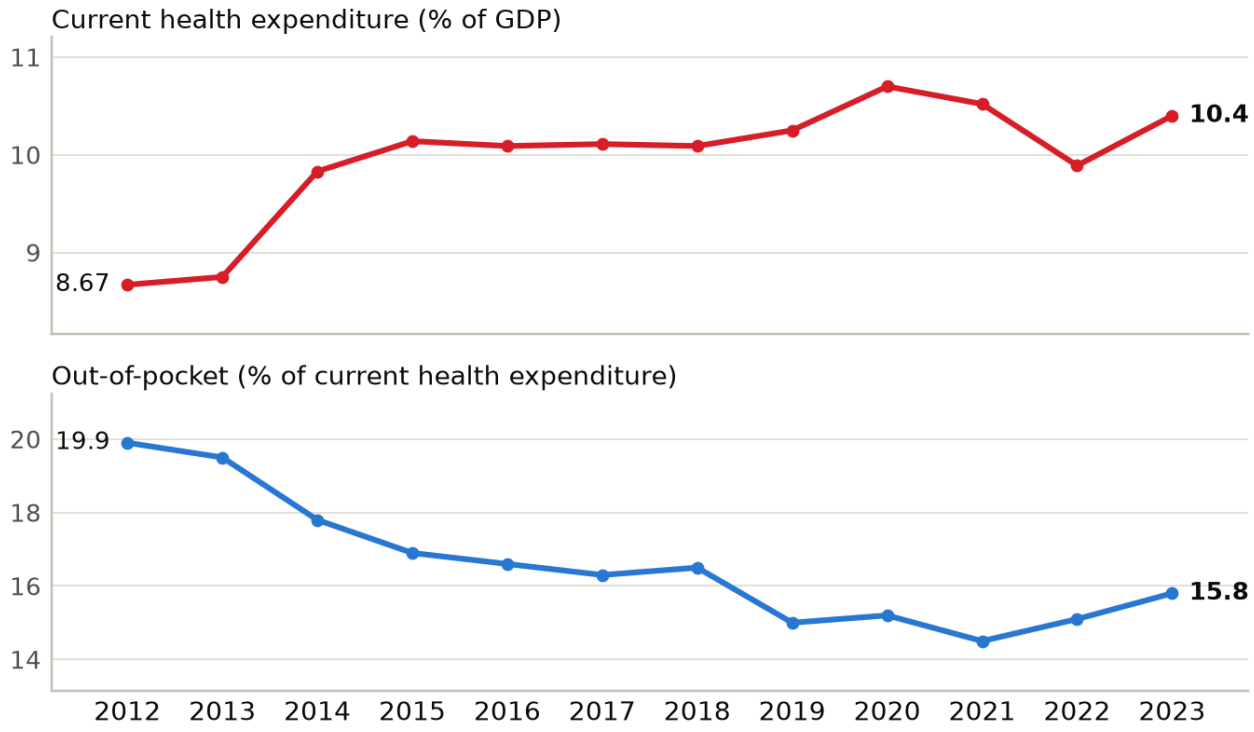

Key takeaways for CSI

- Medicare covers the full cost of public hospital services for citizens and permanent residents.[23]
- Health spending was 10.40 percent of GDP in 2023, below Canada, the United Kingdom and the United States.[32,36]
- Dementia became the leading cause of death in 2024, at 9.4 percent of deaths, overtaking ischemic heart diseases.[20]
- Governments funded 70 percent of the A$290.7 billion in total health spending in 2024-25.[31]

Health System

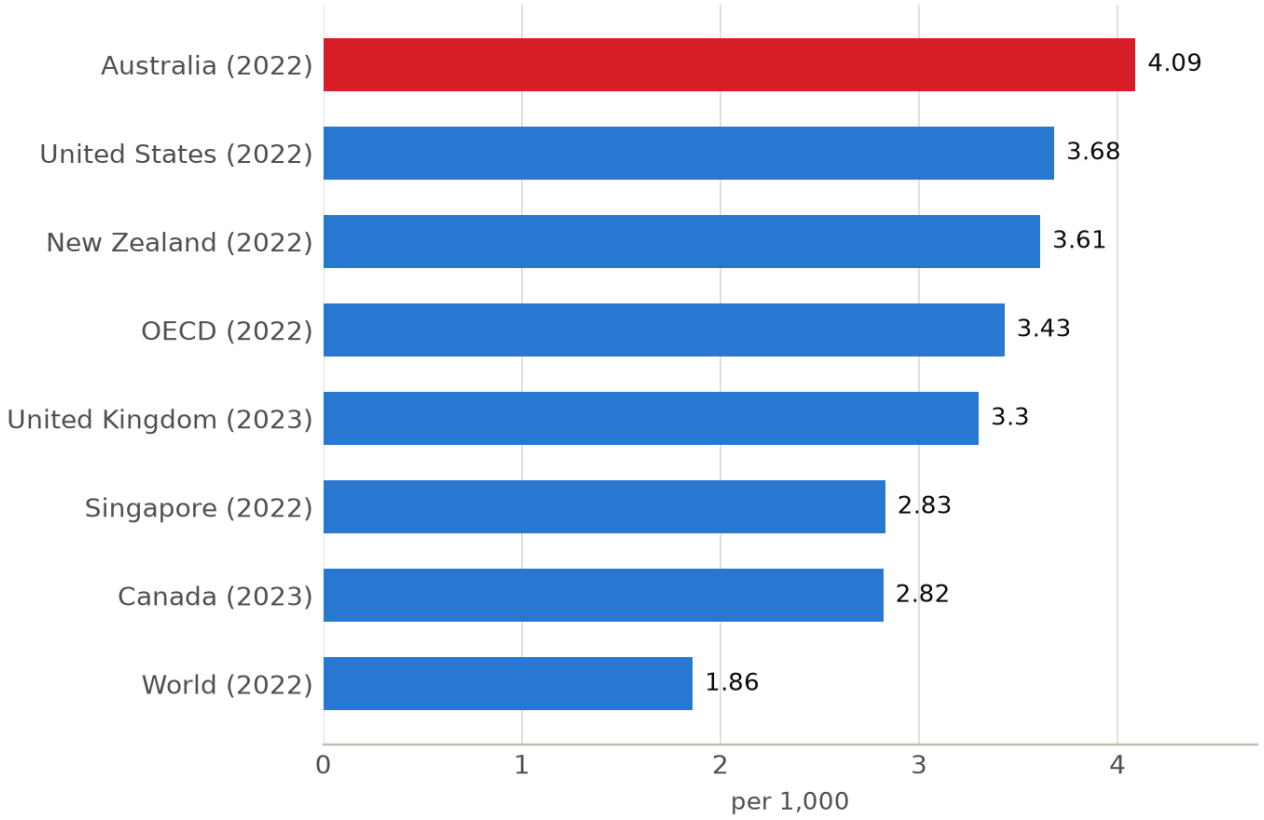

- The 2026-27 Budget provides A$220.3 billion over five years for state public hospital services.[25]
- Bulk billing incentives reached all Australians on 1 November 2025, with 9 in 10 GP visits projected by 2030.[26,27]
- Public hospitals had 67,280 beds in 2023-24, and governments funded 94 percent of their A$103.1 billion recurrent spending.[24]
